THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

This phrase, the higher criticism, is one of which we hear a great deal nowadays. It is a high sounding and mouth-filling phrase, but it is not everybody that uses it who knows what it means.
We are by no means sure that we do.
Sometimes it is used apparently to designate a critical spirit or habit of mind such as permits nothing to escape from investigation by scientific methods.
At other times it expresses some sort of touchstone which recognizes a residium of truth wherever existent, and which rejects what is false with a greater or less degree of infallibility. Thus, if we are told that such and such is accepted by the higher criticism as a historical fact we are inclined to think that it must be a fact, and that, if it is not, its concealment of its identity as a fiction, is highly inconsiderate. From still another point of view, the higher criticism is sometimes alluded to as a system of formulae or methods for applying scientific analysis to records which vary in their report as to something which has occurred, so as to extract from them the highest possible measure of actual truth. Many of the results of the higher criticism give us merely a varying degree of probability, but this probability may verge so closely upon certainty as to be acceptable to most minds as substantial accuracy. It is difficult to explain the methods and results of the higher criticism, but an example of their operation is calculated to make its workings beautifully simple, and to give us the same satisfaction as when we solve a conundrum, or discover the missing feature of a hidden picture. We propose to apply the methods of the higher criticism to two contemporaneous documents referring evidently to the same occurrence which have recently come under our notice.
On page number two of yesterday's Victoria Times at the end of a judicious clipping from the London Sun, there is related an anecdote in which Lord Rosebery was mistaken for a hatter's shop assistant. On page four of the same paper is an excerpt from the London paper M. A. P., which relates a story in which Lord Rosebery is again mistaken for a hatter's shop assistant. We take it that these two documents refer to the same incident. There is nothing remarkable in Lord Rosebery's standing bareheaded in a hatter's shop, and being mistaken for his assistant. In fact a moment's reflection will convince us that a hatter's is entirely the most likely shop in which Lord Rosebery would be standing bareheaded, and be mistaken for a shop assistant. But it would be very remarkable indeed if Lord Rosebery had been twice mistaken for a hatter's shop assistant when he was standing bareheaded in a hatter's shop. The first finding of the higher criticism therefore is that the two contemporaneous documents refer to the same incident. If foot notes were allowed to us, as they are to higher critics, we would here pause to explain that the incident under discussion proves conclusively, and with the best kind of evidence, unconscious evidence, that peers do not wear their coronets when they go to purchase a hat, or (let us never reject possibilities not excluded by the facts) to have an old hat furnished up. We now come to the discrepancies of the two accounts.

The one says that Lord Rosebery was mistaken for a shop assistant by "a somewhat shortsighted gentleman," the other by "an elderly bishop," who asked him for a hat similar to the one he was wearing in the words, "Have you a hat like this?" We are then told in the one account that "Lord Rosebery calmly surveyed the article in question and then with a gentle smile replied blandly, 'No, and if I had I certainly should not wear it'; in the other, that Lord Rosebery "held it for a minute, looked at it very seriously, and then replied, 'No I have not, and if I had—I'm hanged if I'd wear it.'" It will be noticed that the chief discrepancy between the two accounts is to be found in the actual words used by Lord Rosebery. The higher criticism would oblige us to infer that both are variants of what he actually said, and that his original remark was couched in language highly obnoxious to episcopal susceptibilities. For this reason, and also from the fact that a bishop, because of his careful presence in the House of Lords whenever the tithes and temporalities of the church came up for discussion, would be familiar with the appearance of Lord Rosebery, we are obliged to conclude, according to the canons of the higher criticism, that it was not a bishop to whom he addressed his remark, but an elderly gentleman who, although a layman, possessed a somewhat clerical appearance. By this simple illustration we have made clear the method and results of the higher criticism; while the fact that this ancient story has been told of every great man who ever wore a hat from time immemorial, does not destroy, but rather heightens its illustrative value in this connection.

THE DOUKHOBOIRS.

The Slavonic mind seems to possess a peculiar faculty for communal aberration, and a practical devotion to what it has accepted as true which would be sublime if it were not so pitiable. Similar movements to those which are stirring the Doukhobors in Canada, are continually breaking out in Russia among the peasants. There, it is no unusual thing to have whole villages infected with strange delusions, carried into practice with literal consistency. In Russia there is only one remedy applied, the remedy of forcible repression. The Czar has bayonets and bullets with which to keep the peasant within the bounds of rational human existence. He may impale himself upon the one or expose himself to the other, and thus perish; or, if his mania escapes their perish, but perishes he must if he will not conform to the conditions under which life is possible to him. Here in Canada things are different. These unfortunate people will perforce be recognized as wards of the State, and at the present time there appears to be a reasonable likelihood of the portion of Manitoba settled by them being turned into a lunatic asylum at the expense of the government. We made the great mistake of judging the Doukhobors by Western standards. We may have thought that we were merely adding in this Russian community one more to the already numerous sects in Canada. But it appears that we were really introducing a number of people suffering from progressive delusional insanity. They are now here, not in Russia, and we have no doubt that the over-burdened Russian government raised a pean of joy at their departure. If we cannot cure them, we will just have to endure them; but before we make up our minds to that, a very strenuous effort should be made to cure them. They have abandoned their unfortunate stock to starve. Our idea is that a respectable horse should have to work for a living like a respectable human being, and that we owe the animals that serve us the care and kindness which our superior intelligence un-ables us to make beneficial to their health and longevity. We have a duty towards the animal kingdom, which the Doukhobors, with perverted minds, have denied. How to cure such a perversion of the intellect we do not know. But if it is incurable in adults, their children should be taken away from them, and themselves put under the care of doctors in lunacy until their distracted minds are either restored to sanity or released from disease by death.

We have received a copy of a pamphlet published by the British Columbia Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It contains the laws and by-laws relating to this subject, printed in handy form for reference.

In the S. P. C. A.'s pamphlet, we notice a city by-law which prohibits boys from throwing snowballs within the city limits. We suppose this is a necessary city ordinance, but it is rather a grim jest for a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals to draw attention to it.

We are glad to have it upon the authority of the Times, that the Dominion government "is now most anxious to do everything possible to promote the great salmon canning industry of the Fraser and other British Columbia rivers." Evidence of this anxiety will be eagerly looked for.

The Halifax Chronicle, which recently "called down" Mr. Tarte, for his speech at Halifax, quotes from an article in a Conservative paper, which winds up with the question: "Who represents the Liberal Party, Tarte or the editor of the Chronicle? We bet on Tarte," and heads its quotation, "Tory tooting for Tarte." The Chronicle is Mr. Fielding's organ. Such is the harmony and lovingkindness which exists in the cabinet.

Seattle has been getting it hot and heavy from the press of the State of Washington, and some of Seattle's own newspapers have not been altogether silent in reference to the way the carnival was conducted. The following from the Spokesman-Review is vitriolic. If a Canadian paper had written anything like it about Seattle, blood alone would settle the Alaska Boundary dispute, in the opinion of Seattle:

According to reports, the Seattle hosts went systematically about to fleece anybody and everybody who chanced to take in the carnival. Hotels ran up their rates and charged first-class prices for fourth-class accommodations; there was an advance in all restaurant tariffs, with intentional mistakes made in meal slips to the benefit of the restaurant, and the short change scheme worked with never-failing success. The guests would stand for it.

If reports have not been exaggerated, the carnival itself was in many particulars a grand game of bunco. Fakes and surreptitious men were given full sway until the robbery became too open and notorious to be longer suffered, and hoodlums and toughs, when they were not given to gold-digging, grafting and pocket-picking, made merry with decent people by coarse pranks and personal insult. It seems to have been a case of sacking the town and at the financial moral, mental and physical expense of the visitors.

We are ready to believe that Seattle is cursed with a large predatory element, but we do not believe that Seattle as a whole is an organized den of robbers.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

Sir—Whilst the matter of improving the harbor is under public consideration, it would be well to bear in mind that in approaching the Federal government it must be treated as a national and not as a purely local question. In your issue of Monday your reprint an admirable article from the Ottawa Citizen, in which the value of the value of encouraging improvements in transportation facilities as a means of building up the commerce of a country. It calls attention to the fact that the opening of the Intercolonial railway was a means of diverting a large amount of the transportation trade from American Canadian carriers, bringing back in fact, no less than $1,000,000 in one year's returns. Faster freight and passenger transports and improved facilities at their points of contact will help to build up and keep on the shore more or less of foreign trade. This would mean a good deal to Canada, and it should be secured.
The handling of the freight, but, on the principle that full ships, expeditiously and cheaply, mean low freight rates, we would be able to compete more successfully with foreign rivals. These improvements in the harbor and the harbor facilities corresponding improvement in harbor facilities, the harbor offering the best facilities controlling the trade. If Victoria does not secure the fullest improvement of her harbor now, its day of usefulness will pass away. The is of our harbor, it is not that it does not progress it will decline, and loss of vitality means decay. No half measure will arrest this decline, and the only way to a useful purpose. The best and the most complete harbor on the Pacific coast is what we ought to strive for. It is not a matter of keeping her place among Canadian cities.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST FAIR.

Magnitude and Diversity of Russian Trade Meeting.

From St. James Gazette.
Nijni Novgorod, which simply signifies Lower New Town, is the creation of Old Novgorod, the ancient seat of all Russian cities, which is the cradle of Muscovite history. Old Novgorod, situated romantically by the apex of Lake Ilmen, only 122 miles southeast of St. Petersburg, is the feet of the pretty Valdai Hills, sent a colony eastward, which planted Nijni Novgorod in a singular spot. For that site is exactly in the heart of European Russia, and it is at the junction of two noble rivers, the Volga and the Oka, that the city stands. The position of Nijni Novgorod sufficiently accounts for the fact that it is one of the great cities of the greatest trade-meeting in the world.
This has ever sprung up in any age or place to compare with this annual institution, either for magnitude or for diversified interests.

The extraordinary feature of this colossal fair is that it tends to increase rather than to diminish in commercial importance, notwithstanding the counter influence of the vast railway system which has been built to take into account. The population of Russia has enormously multiplied until it now numbers in the whole empire, 132, 000,000; and the railway system has been for the most part designed rather to subserve military strategy than commercial convenience.

The fair opens on July 15 (old style) and remains open as a wholesale market till August 25; but then commences the great retail fair, which is not closed till September 10. The English tourist who wishes to see the world's greatest fair for the purpose of seeing this unique display must add a fortnight to these dates, to make them correspond with the new-style calendar.
It will be seen that the occasion happens to fall in the season of the greatest heat; but the enchantment of the Russian climate is so dry and pellucid that the warmth is no means as oppressive as might be expected. The fair is held on a site situated on a great area of flat land formed by the two rivers, the fair owns a superb site, and this point is the very focus of the great European dominions, to which from every point of every province the trade routes converge.

The fair opens, as everything in Russia must be inaugurated, with a most imposing ceremonial arranged by the authorities of state and church. A gun is fired and immediately a procession is formed in which all the chief civil and spiritual authorities, as well as the military, are present. Bells are rung in all directions, Russia knows nothing of functions, small or great, without wonderful and accompanied accompaniments, and the effect is attention pleasing, for such bells are heard in no other land, and are manufactured in the great Russian factories for the countless churches.

Who surprises the spectator when first he enters the fair is the substantial and actor of the shops. There are few that are frail. The vast majority are of brick, covered with cement, and heated all over restored. Here is an immense and solidly built town, and yet during all the winter, spring, and early summer the scene is absolately empty and silent, and in the spring all the streets are under water, the Oka overflowing its banks while the deep snow is melting on the vast steppes. This magnificent fair draws to itself vast masses of commodities. The central industrial governments send their manufactured goods; the Urals their metals; Siberia dispatches furs, oils, skins, tallow; the Kamchatka, the Caucasus petroleum and wine; central Asia cotton and lamb-skins; Persia fruits; China tea; little Russia tobacco; salt; the Western Europe an innumerable variety of manufactured goods. Some fresh surprise awaits the pedestrian at every turn.

This Week's Skagway Fleet

Princess May Got In Last Night With Number of Passengers.

Liners Sailing for and Due to Arrive From the Far East.

The steamer Princess May did not after all have the large crowd of passengers that was expected on her. Those who came up the river on the cheap rate boats had already found passage for the South and there was a dull in the rush up the river. There were fifty passengers on the steamer, thirty-five for the Sound, three for Vancouver, four for Nanaimo and four for Victoria. The South and Nanaimo passengers, and many of those bound for the Sound, arrived here on the steamer last night, the Vancouver passengers leaving here at Vancouver. The local passengers were: Mrs. Brantley, D. McPhee, J. McKenzie and Hugh McKay. The trip of the Princess May was without unusual incident. She will today load her Victoria freight for the North, loading a big shipment from the brickman-Ker mills, and proceeding to Vancouver during the day, leave there on Thursday. Other Northern steamers sailing from here this week are: the City of Seattle, the Spokane, the former sailed Monday morning, calling here for nine tons of freight and several passengers. She had a heavy cargo but few passengers. The City of Seattle, on Friday, the big excursion steamer making several extra trips to carry the overflow freight for Alaskan points, which the regular liners cannot carry.

TEES ARRIVES.

Reached Vancouver Monday Morning and Came Down Last Night.

Although she reached Vancouver early Monday morning, it was late last night before the steamer Tees reached Victoria. The delay in the Terminal City was caused by the decision of the C. P. N. company to allow as many of their employees as possible to enjoy the holiday afforded by Labor Day. Therefore upon her arrival at Vancouver the crew were given the day off, and the unloading of her Vancouver cargo did not commence until yesterday morning. Those passengers who wished to do so, came down by the Charnier Monday night. The list of passengers was a long one, the names appearing in another column. Amongst the freight list was 21 tons of ore from the Princess Royal mine, on Princess Royal Island, en route to the Tacoma smelter. The ore is said to average $120 in value to the ton. The following were the Tees' salmon cargo: From the Inverness, 1,000 cases; from the B. A. C., 1,772; Standard, 425; Lowe Inlet, 800; Claxton, 1,890; Namu, 850; R. L. C., 562; Good Hope, 611; Alert Bay, 1,075.

SAN FRANCISCO LINERS.

Queen In From Bay City and City of Puebla Sails South.

Among the arrivals on Monday from the ocean was the San Francisco liner Queen. She arrived early in the morning and had 164 passengers and a full cargo of freight. The Queen is en route to the City of Puebla sailing south, her cabin passengers from Victoria being: A. S. Teague, C. Russell, F. Wilson, E. B. Dill and wife, G. W. Riley and wife, F. Somerville, James Marsh, Robert Jones, G. J. Perry, Mrs. C. Heanski and child, Miss M. F. Wright, Miss E. S. Belyea.

ORIENTAL LINERS.

Athenian Sailed on Monday Evening—Victoria Due Today.

The next ten days will see the arrival and departure of a number of Oriental liners, which make this the first and last port of call. The C. P. R. liner Athenian got away on Monday evening. She will be followed by the N. P. R. steamer Victoria, which is due today from Chinese and Japanese ports. The next N. P. R. liner due is the Ping Suey, which was delayed by an accident in the Orient. The Clavering, of the same line, sailed from Tacoma outward-bound yesterday, but will not call here. Next Tuesday the Nippon Yusen Kaisha's steamer Tosa Maru will call outward-bound, and the Kaga is due to arrive.

Labor Day At Nanaimo

Black Diamond City the Scene of a Successful Celebration.

Many Excursionists—A Grand Street Parade—Athletic Sports.

That Victoria did her share towards fittingly celebrating Labor Day at Nanaimo yesterday was amply proved by the appearance of the two large sailing ships in the morning for that city. The first consisted of some seven or eight coaches and the second of four or five, and to the last arriving passengers was left the choice of a soft side of a box in the baggage car, or a stand in the Lady Smith a special train was run early in the morning, and besides this, quite a number took the regular train on its excursion. From Vancouver, too, came arrival. From Nanaimo, with other crowds of pleasure-seekers, and Nanaimo's picturesque streets presented a most animated appearance throughout the day. Several of the leading stores had taken much trouble to the festive appearance of the streets by a liberal use of bunting and evergreens.

Of course the procession, headed by the Fire Department, and the feature of the day, and the number of carefully prepared and handsome-looking floats in the line made this item of the day's programme an exceedingly attractive one. One of these floats, and was most thoroughly worked out, the honey being shown in every step of its preparation from the live to the market, the display being a part of the day's programme.

Act. he complimented J. H. Hawththwaite for his services with regard to the weakness of the British Columbia act was that there was not a strong union back of it to see that the provisions were carried out. In England a similar act had been rendered inoperative in parts where strong unions did not exist. Single individuals could not come up against employers with the resources of Dunsmuir and have the law enforced. It was impossible to operate good laws for workingmen without good trades unions back of it. It was the union which must insist upon the law's enforcement, and the workingmen to put down all jealousies and faction fights. They should take advantage of every principle which would help their cause, no matter from what source it came.

Chris Foley regretted the evidence of lack of unity among laborers. He believed in utilizing the ballot box to obtain the remedies to the evils existing. He was not opposed to the ends which socialism sought to obtain, but he did object to the methods employed to obtain that end. After a strong plea for education and a recital of the demands made by the laborers of agitators, he advised socialists to assist trades unions. They should cease their bickering and aim at accomplishing the ends in view. He was sorry that the unionists in such a camp as Nanaimo, in cutting off the unions' affiliation with the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, the miners had, in his opinion, made a mistake.

R. T. Kingsley, socialist lecturer, was given an attentive hearing. He saw that trades unionism was now beginning to take the place of real labor. Hitherto it had been part of the political organization. The labor problem was not one of ten cents advance in wages, but the setting of the political power of the country. The capitalists of the stock combination had developed into a parasite and the wage slaves of today were handling the machinery. He advocated the abolition of wage slavery by which workers must seek a boss and the abolition of combination for sale. The production should be done alone. The revolution, he said, which he advocated came by intelligent men agreeing to better their condition.

The meeting then adjourned.
